Jesse Louis Jackson, Sr. is an American civil rights activist, and Baptist minister. During the 1980s, he achieved wide fame as a politician, as well as becoming a well-known spokesman for civil rights issues. In 1980 for example, Jackson mediated in a firefighters' strike. He was a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1984 and 1988 and served as a shadow U.S. Senator for the District of Columbia from 1991 to 1997. He is the founder of the organisations that merged to form Rainbow/PUSH. Former U.S. Representative Jesse Jackson, Jr. is his eldest son. Jackson was also the host of Both Sides with Jesse Jackson on CNN from 1992 to 2000.

Writing in a 1977 National Right to Life Committee News report, Jackson argued that the basis for Roe v. Wade "" the right to privacy "" was also a premise that had been used to justify slavery and the treatment of slaves on the plantations. Jackson decried what he believed was the casual taking of life, and the decline in society's value system.

Christiane Taubira said after a meeting with Jesse Jackson: "I met the Rev. Jesse Jackson, also on a visit here. It was an opportunity to discuss how France has seized the memory of slavery and hot topics that are not lacking in the United States and in France." The Minister unveils then, her agenda for the next four days of visits between Martinique, then Guadeloupe St Martin and Saint Barthelemy before joining Cuba and Haiti. "Then I opened the new Court of Appeal Fort de France with Serge Letchimy, regional president and Didier Laguerre the mayor. It marks the return to the city of righteousness, that was long removed from the heart of the city here. Before joining the town hall for the signing of an agreement with the judicial protection of youth, I went to Foyalais downtown for nearly two hours. The welcome was there, as always, extremely welcoming and généreux. Afterwards we have met the 2015 graduates of the city; I finally went visiting the house of justice and law and AAPAS association, two major players access the right to victim assistance and crime prevention. "

Later, she tells us later that she will soon travel to the US to meet her counterpart Loretta Lynch, Attorney General of the United States.
